

Conference Report

Mike Hart, Professor of Business and Informatics, read a paper to E-Learn 2004 World Conference on E-Learning in Corporate Government, Healthcare and Higher Education held from November 1-5 in Washington, DC. In the conference, over 621 presentations were made and more than 50 countries represented. Each paper was double refereed and published in the proceedings and CD-ROM of the conference.

Mike reports that his paper on “The ‘new plagiarism’, academic dishonesty and the development of critical thinking skills” was well received, with one delegate even delaying her flight in order that she could attend it. Mike comments ‘As always, such conferences are as useful for the range of interesting contacts that are made as well as the presentations themselves - I anticipate that several new avenues for cooperation and research will now present themselves’
